We guarantee meeting the legal requirements for Extra Virgin Olive Oil!

Due to fraud with olive oils in recent history, the European Union has established strict legislations concerning these products. The implications of this decision are primarily laid down in Regulation (EU) No 1234/2007, being in force in all member states of the European Union. The regulation states that in order for an olive oil to be called "Extra Virgin Olive Oil", the oil has to be of "a superior category where the oil is directly obtained from olives solely by mechanical means". Additionally, the extra virgin olive oil cannot exceed 0,8% product acidity and the temperature during pressing should not exceed 27°C, as both these factors have detrimental effects on the organoleptic properties of the oil.

On top of that, additional legislation regarding olive oil content characteristics is implemented by Regulation (EU) No 1348/2013. This regulation also states by which analysis methods these properties have to be measured. We control this by demanding a certificate of compliance for these requirements, or by requesting the analysis report ourselves.

Of course, Oil&Vinegar completely complies to the marketing standards for olive oil, as laid down in Regulation (EU) No 29/2012 of the European Union.

Traceability

Traceability is a major priority in our organization. We value traceability from farmer to store. Due to this extensive administration, we can guarantee that wherever our products are, we can effectively take action whenever anything might be wrong with a product, guaranteeing the best quality extra virgin olive oils for the consumer!
